Donnie Radcliffe interview 9/3/31-6/2, inc 114 hrs)
Post 6/16/74

By Harry Naltchayan—The Washington Post

Mrs. Mitchell at the organ in her Fifth Avenue apartment.

leave some permanent memento to Blair House as their predecessors had.

She ordered needlepoint designs made of the presidential, vice presidential and departmental seals, she said. The cost came to about [illegible] and when the bills went [illegible] that First Lady Pat Nixon [illegible] most.

Mrs. Nixon [illegible] her status" being [illegible] ing to Mrs. Mitchell. "She [illegible] the hell out of me. That's [illegible] I wanted to get out of Washington, [illegible] didn't want to compete with [illegible]

[illegible] of an aide that some time during the [illegible] weekend somebody" told him about [illegible] the burglary. When he found out, he [illegible] he did "nothing."

According to Mrs. Mitchell, her husband was asleep on the 17th in the New [illegible] Hotel, sharing a [illegible] with her. At 7 a.m. (10 a.m. Washington [illegible] the phone rang. She said she [illegible] "Who in the h— is calling us at 7 o'clock?" When she picked up the [illegible] heard the operator say, "The White House is calling. We have [illegible] for Mr. Mitchell."

[illegible] Mitchell took the call in the [illegible] adjoining living room. [illegible] Mrs. Mitchell swears, "[illegible] heard her say, 'Yes, Mr. President.' [illegible] then [illegible] harangue from the [illegible] for the reelection of the [illegible] and went on with them in [illegible] about [illegible] Watergate [illegible] Hahnemann Hospital [illegible] the White House [illegible] Mrs. Mitchell [illegible] Mitchell [illegible] Mitchell [illegible]